Orientation Retreat, April 11-12, 2019

Remembering Catherine Gira

We are mourning the passing of our inaugural class member (class pictured below), leader, friend, mentor, and former chair of our Board of Directors, Dr. Catherine R. Gira '93 (LM). We are thankful we had the opportunity to honor her with our Platinum Award for Leadership in Education at our 25th Anniversary Celebration (pictured below). Read more about her life here.

Event: Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Economic Update – NEW INFO BELOW

Part I: To better understand whether Baltimore's financial system is sufficient and diverse enough to support the city's small businesses and their varying needs, the Johns Hopkins 21st Century Cities Initiative (21CC) spent the past two years analyzing data, interviewing experts, and convening stakeholders. 21CC published three reports presenting a robust set of findings and recommendations relating to the local financial system. The project asked the following core questions: What are the sources and amounts of financial investments, both private and public, going to firms in Baltimore, and what are the historical trends? How much capital originates from local sources versus regional and national? What are the gaps in financing types and amounts?

Part II: The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's Research department is conducting a multi-year research initiative in Baltimore City to further understand the barriers and incentives individuals living in persistent poverty face when making economic decisions. As part of this initiative, the department's community development research staff is investigating whether the current ecosystem of programs available to those in poverty provides access to resources necessary to move upward along the economic ladder. The presentation on May 7 will showcase their preliminary findings for an assessment of need in Baltimore communities, an analysis of resident funding streams and a survey of nonprofit service providers in the economic mobility ecosystem.

Seeking Volunteers

Jennifer Gauthier '16, Founder/Executive Director of Lead4Life, a non profit having a major impact on generations of families through creative and innovative programs, is seeking new board members. The organization enriches the lives of at risk, children, youth and families while positively impacting the quality of life in Maryland communities. They strive to help others reach their highest potential. If you have expertise in fundraising, accounting, clinical services, business administration, marketing, grant writing or technology, you can help Lead4Life continue to make positive strides in improving and enriching the lives of many individuals and families. They want people who are willing to make this one of their top three priorities as a community leader. If you are interested and/ or would like additional information, please visit their website www.Lead4Lifeinc.org or email your statement of interest and resume to Jennifer Gauthier at gauthier@lead4lifeinc.org.

LAST CHANCE: Spots are filling up!
